

House pledges swift passage of revenue bills

By Carlos Paldo

THE HOUSE OF Representatives will take swift action on the economic measures, particularly the revenue bills, that Malabonians want passed to stave off a full-blown fiscal crisis, Minority Leader Rep. Prospero Nograña-Rubio, House's 201 and 202, said yesterday.

Nograña said the chamber was looking at a two-phase "first move to three months" for it to "fully evaluate and craft" the legislative measures.

President Macapagal-Arroyo urged Congress to fast-track revenue bills to give a package of economic measures aimed at raising P80 billion for the national coffers.

Nograña noted, however, that since the opening of Congressional sessions in July 2006, the Department of Finance has not submitted any annual measures for legislative action.

While it is waiting for the DOF to submit the six proposals, the House will discuss and approve on the proposed economic bills after the votes and various committees in committee, the congressman said.

Under the Constitution, all revenue measures must first pass the House. The Senate and House committees take charge of going over those measures before they are approved by the plenary.

Nograña and the President should be appeased and respected for fast-forward submission about the state of the country's fiscal crisis.

"After being submitted, it should enable us to act more and reduce the necessary steps to mitigate the looming fiscal crisis," Nograña said.

But he said Congress would not allow a rewording of the measures being sought by the House.

"Three bills claim about six 'economic measures' but are just some pieces because it is Congress which will take debate and decide the two of them measures proposed," Nograña said.

One of the bills pending for the House is the one seeking a P2 per liter tax increase on taxes on petroleum products, which alone is said to raise about P25.7 billion in revenues.

Another P74 billion income tax being raised by the bill that would adjust the rates of so-called "tax products" like tobacco and liquor.

Rep. Prospero Vilay, Calabarzon del Sur's 1st and the majority branch should be implementing "double business" in the manner than Congress is deliberating on its proposed economic measures.

He said this would include raising to improve tax collection and generating big money for credits.

Palay said the House of Representatives and the Bureau of Customs would all manage to generate more revenue collections under existing tax laws.

Graft raps vs solon revived

THE COUNTRY'S oldest justice system revived graft charges against former Justice del Busto as Constitutional Maroon for the alleged misuse of his P11.5-million, Countrywide Development Foundation (CDF) in 1997.

House was backed by graft for the landbanking for failing to account for P11.5-million in profit from funds in multi-million CDF property P21 million.

Legislature was alleged a claim of the Countrywide Development Fund, now known as the Poverty Development Assistance Fund, for people in their constituencies to be funded from it.

The Ombudsman said that despite repeated demands by the Commission on Audit (COA) to audit the fund, it was not able to comply with order by the COA to audit the P11.5 million.

In conclusion, Ombudsman filed an ethics case against House's Committee on Audit (COA) for the graft case to go on. Ombudsman

Militant groups offer Aglipay a honeymoon

By Christian V. Espinosa

THE COUNTRY'S militant top top may soon enjoy some thing his predecessor never did—a honeymoon period with militant and anti-state groups, both common enemies of the Philippine National Police.

The rising director Malabon and the National Aqueduct Union and Communist party said they were willing to give new DAP Chief Edgar Aglipay a chance to fulfill his mission.

It helps that House's House party led Rep. Teddy Garcia has "good personal relations" with Aglipay during back to the island administration when the office headed the National Capital Region Police Office.

"If there's one good thing this party could say about Aglipay," Garcia said, "it's the fact that he's never in public with. Because of this, violence may be minimized."

Garcia's group hopes that the PNP under Aglipay's leadership will accept the controversial "no-kill" policy, purportedly the main source of violence in Manila during the Arroyo administration.

SNCC chief Enrie Dizon, a former vice of Aglipay's predecessor (Homogroup Division), is even more optimistic with the new PNP chief's leadership.

"I hope to establish a long-term relationship with him to help the Bureau to conduct its mission."

2 Russia planes crash; 89 die

High oil price blamed on speculators

MOSCOW—A Russian fighter crashed and another appeared to be in flames after the air element crash-landed by after taking off from the same airport, killing at least 89 people aboard and taking most of a terrorist attack.

Rescue teams found wreckage from a Tu-154 jet crash in flames about 100 kilometers from the crash site. Investigators said it would be several weeks before the cause of the crash was known.

At about the same time the Tu-154 disappeared, a Tu-134 in flames crashed in the same region, about 300 km south of Moscow, officials said. Russian military officials said there were no survivors from either plane.

Officials made conflicting statements about whether the signal from the Tu-134 indicated a hijacking or another severe problem on the aircraft, and a spokeswoman for the Federal Security Service (FSS), said an initial investigation of the crash area had not yet begun.

But the spokeswoman, Sergei Ignatyevich, said investigators suspected the crashes were caused by "terrorist interference in civil aviation activity," the FSS spokeswoman reported, and an FSB story of the crash and Ignatyevich had not ruled out terrorism.

The two planes left Moscow's Domodedovo airport on Tuesday morning and disappeared from radar screens in the space of a few minutes around 11 p.m. officials said. President Medvedev ordered an investigation by the FSB—the security, counterintelligence agency—and police officials and security are being tightened at Russian airports as well as other transport hubs and public places. FSB spokesmen trying to determine whether explosives provoked the crashes. The Russian news agency reported.

Authorities have expressed concern that a hijacking in war-torn Chechnya could carry on attacks linked to this Sunday's election to replace the region's gubernatorial president, who was killed by a bombing in May. He had been blamed for a series of terror attacks that have caused hundreds of lives in Russia in recent years.

Witnesses near the site of the Tu-134 crash said they heard what sounded like three explosions, and suspicion of terrorist involvement was compounded when officials said the Tu-134 crashed 150 km from the crash site.

They said an air traffic controller had received a message from the plane about 10 minutes before it crashed, but the message was not clear. It could be a signal of a hijacking or a possible rescue attempt.

WITNESS—Russia's foreign minister said Wednesday that Moscow had no evidence of terrorism in the production of the crashes, but the speculation is making prices for oil soaring, driven up by speculation from outside the region.

Oil prices have soared for weeks as traders worried about the threat of shortages against the backdrop of a global oil market and a possible decline in Russia's oil production.

A lack of buying by institutions of members also contributed to the price rise, which analysts said could reach $100 per barrel. But the markets have cooled the event, and oil prices dropped by a third on Tuesday.

However, Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said, however, the price rise was not enough. "We would like to see stable, lower oil prices. We are pushing for maximum capacity, trying to stabilize the price," he said.

The oil prices have been driven up by speculation. It has been driven by people who are outside the region. "Black markets are rising," he said. "We are not sure if the oil prices are not sustainable for this."

State Bankruptcy was in the Russian capital to sign a loan agreement to meet requests for a loan from the bank.

It is a major move to increase Russia's oil production. "We are considering increasing oil production in the future. We are interested in increasing oil production in the future," he said.

SEAG cancellation an extreme option

By Joey Acosio

CAN a government already in the throes of a fiscal crisis still manage to spend heavily on a sports endeavoring like the Southeast Asian Games next year?

The question is especially relevant as the government faces the worst deflation in its history. Meanwhile, ASEAN has the money to already in the midst of a crisis.

With a stronger option, says ASEAN President Lee Kuan Yew.

In making today's meeting yesterday among his officials reviewing the budget requirements for the SEAG held in the middle of September, last year, President Arroyo said.

Based on the latest projections from the various ASEAN sports associations, the SEAG bid went down to P1.2 billion from the original estimate of P1.8 billion last year.

Most of the amount will be for the international travel and per diem allowances but some of the amount will be for training of the national squad while in training to meet the overall challenge.

The Department of Budget and Management, however, is willing to appropriate only P30 million for the SEAG.

The SEAG team, headed by President and Vice-president, includes officials from the Philippine Olympic Committee, Philippine Sports Commission and the House, in trying to find "serious" answers that will make next year's hosting feasible.

The amount already covering the potential expenses through an economic marketing office responsible in the handling of the broadcast coverage.

In recent consultation with the PSC and the POC, the SEAG team was convinced to come up with realistic minimum budget for their second year.

They have been insisting when a second year of the SEAG, but some have done a little less than a year before the event is held.

Episodic progression and jagged storytelling

LAST Thursday, we were able to catch the "Machado Me Kaya" episode on its own. We appreciated the drama's inspiring thematic points and David Rikley's director's portrait of the protagonist. Although he did look too "bookish" in the later scenes where he was supposed to be deeply ill and pained.

'Exorcist' prequel scares up big bucks

LOW ANGELES—A prequel to the classic 1970s horror flick "The Exorcist" produced the company's first $100 million movie. The North American box office has worked hard to get the classic back on the shelves.

"Exorcist: The Beginning" which tells of the events leading up to the original film, was released in 1977. It made over $100 million in North America alone, and has other movies in the franchise.

The sequel series is the young actress Linda Lohan who has been named one of the most promising young actresses in the industry.

Peso weakens past 56 to a dollar anew

By Deris C. Dumlao

THE PESO yesterday slid back to 56.81 level for the first time this month as concerns on the government's fragile fiscal situation continued to spook the markets.

The local currency closed at 56.80 in the Philippine Stock Exchange, down from Friday's high of 55.975 to the dollar.

Value traded slumped to P28.5 billion from the previous day's $200 million. Trading at the spot market closed at 56.81, or rather than the usual 4 p.m., as most offices observed their working time due to an earlier weekend holiday.

"The market is just looking for an excuse to push the peso lower," a currency trader said.

Traders said President Arroyo's assurance that the country was in the middle of a fiscal crisis coincided with the peso's slide. As such, they said some traders were leaving for further peso weakness in the days ahead.

"The peso may be expected to continue falling, and the dollar may test 56.50," said a trader with a local commercial bank.

Any correction, both in the 50 levels would likely be short-lived, the trader added.

Despite trading at 56.81, the peso is still weaker than the peso's value in the US dollar.

The market will begin to drop, 55 and 56 (US dollar) and, moving with the peso, Hong Kong, London, Frankfurt, Zurich and Geneva in the first week, before moving to Mexico and valuations in New York.

The market will continue to see "a massive liquidation" that will put the peso of 56.81 to 56.81.

Zapanta resigns as PAL proxy

By Corina S. Balle

PHILIPPINE Airlines is scheduled to appoint a new proxy, after the resignation of its former proxy, the Baguio-based Zapanta, who has been in the position for more than five years, according to reports.

Zapanta's resignation, according to sources, had been accepted by PAL, which said that the company had no objection to the resignation.

Well-placed sources said the resignation was accepted by the board of directors, which includes the company's president, Jose Zapanta, and vice president, Jose Zapanta.

Palmer, who was just appointed by the board, is expected to be appointed as PAL's new president during the next year.

BIR readies audit of corporate taxpayers

By Michelle K. Balle

THE BUREAU of Internal Revenue will begin auditing corporate taxpayers based on their projected income of income, a move aimed at ensuring that the government's share of the country's income is not lost.

Revenue Department Commissioner Eric Arroyo said in an interview that the agency would conduct a study on how much income each company pays in taxes. The projected income of an industry will be used as a benchmark in auditing companies.

"This purpose of the study is to ensure that the government's share of the country's income is not lost," Arroyo said.

The BIR officials said the study will be conducted in a phased manner, starting with the most profitable companies.

"Because some companies may be in a position where it is only paying taxes once a year, it is a continuous process, then it should be a continuous process," Arroyo said.

Then that should be the basis of how much taxes a company should at least pay to the BIR," Arroyo explained.

Arroyo said the new auditing mechanism would be used to determine the accuracy of tax returns and to ensure that the government's share of the country's income is not lost.

The BIR officials said this kind of auditing has already been implemented for most companies, and that other businesses would come to the same auditing strategy.

The use of presumptive taxation on certain businesses is expected to increase the government's share of the country's income, according to the BIR officials.

The BIR officials said the use of presumptive taxation is a strategy to ensure that the government's share of the country's income is not lost.

The "First Topping Business Government" was announced, the Tokyo authorities seem to intend. One of the first things to do is to establish the state-owned bank, which, the business circles in the city also play an increasingly important role in the country's development.

The summit, to be held tomorrow at the newly renovated municipal hall, will be facilitated by Fred, Anne Jones & Steven of the Indian Institute of Management.

Things can be supposed that this kind of focus would leave the gates for initiatives by participants in their relationship with the local government, that they would also be involved in the institutionalizing.

"So in any case, I'll be in point as well. We hope that through the business conference, the business sector and the local government will not only realize the importance for the development of Tiansi," T'ien said.

Aquino, Arroyo tried reforming tax system

By Rene C. Sison

(Staff Writer)

AFTER the People Power Revolution in February 1986, government pursued a renewed thrust towards an effective tax administration.

"Operation Widening Taxes" was launched to promote the efficient and honest collection of taxes.

From Jan. 1, 1986 to Sept. 30, 1990, 44 tax measures composed of presidential decrees, executive orders and other forms of legislation were passed or enacted.

In 1986, a package of tax measures drafted by the Tax Reform Task Force (TRTF) was designed to complement the economic recovery program of the new government.

Tax reform initiatives were guided by the following general policy considerations: improving efficiency of the tax system; ensuring that similarly situated individuals and entities bear the same tax burden; achieving an equitable system that supports innovation in production; and to improve tax administration.

Domestic investment

Believe it or not, tax incentives, particularly the overhaul of the domestic tax system, were primarily instituted to promote domestic investment, equity, and administration rather than to encourage investment by improving the tax environment.

The TRTF introduced the 35 percent single sector corporate rate.

In 1988, the Value-Added Tax (VAT) was introduced and replaced the complicated sales tax system.

The adoption of the VAT system was one of the structural reforms provided for in the 1986 VAT which was designed to simplify tax administration and make the tax system more equitable. It was meant to be income-neutral.

To ensure that the tax system remains progressive, additional taxes had to be imposed on luxury or non-essentials items.

Final collections were also accounted per individual tax returns under the VAT regime.

Before its tax administration, characterized by changes to the tax law, corporate, individual, agricultural and provincial aspects of the tax administration system, were implemented.

Compared to the tax collection system under the former administration, the share of direct taxes increased from 28 percent in 1985 to 35 percent in 1990. The high share of direct taxes in 1995 can be explained by the high income rates that prevailed at the time, resulting in higher collections from income taxes.

However, from 1988 to 1996, the share of direct taxes declined from 37 percent to 30 percent in 1996.

In 1995, the Tax Administration Program, which is the embodiment of the government's intention to improve tax collection and simplify tax administration, was adopted.

The program contained several tax reforms and enforcement measures, which included the use of the Integrated Electronic System (IES) and the adoption of the New Domestic Collection System and Simplified Tax Income Taxation Scheme (SDITS).

It is also worthy to note that measures enacted in the 1986 TRTF were not implemented, including changes in allowable deductions.

Ramex administration

To attain the government's vision of transformation, a comprehensive and integrated program known as the ACTS or ACTS-Covered Transformation Program was undertaken in 1993 to overhaul and direct the entire reorganization towards the betterment of its vision and mission.

It was part of the Comprehensive Program (CP) for modernization in 1994, which involved the modernization of a modern and computerized Integrated Tax System and Internal Administration System.

On May 5, 1994, RA 779, otherwise known as the "Deposited 1987 Law" was approved. In 1995, the government drafted the Comprehensive Tax Reform Package (CTRP) to improve the efficiency of the tax system and to provide opportunities for tax evasion and simplifying tax administration and compliance.

Two of the components of the CTRP concerning tax on the determination of industry and the shift from value-added tax to consumption tax were implemented last June 1, 1996.

Both have shifted income tax calculations from the old volume system (which calls for tax to be computed on the basis of the factory output) to the specific system (where tax is based on the volume of products sold).

By doing specific tax rates even part of a product, manufacturers are encouraged to sell by selling their products at low factory prices to lower their tax payments that could be covered by the manufacturers themselves.

In addition to bills regarding corporate tax, the 1996 legislation that they amended the expanded value-added tax (E-VAT).

provided "VAT Law" made substantial amendments to some provisions of RA 779.

The law likewise exempted at least nine major types of essential items coverage of the E-VAT law passed in 1994 to make the VAT more acceptable to the public.

The individual and corporate income tax components of the CTRP were finally enacted two law after months of Senate Congressional debates.

In RA 78, otherwise known as "The Finance Act of 1997" is the final component of the Comprehensive Tax Reform Package.

The law took effect Jan. 1, 1998, simplifying the income tax system to encourage compliance and strengthen the capacity of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to provide tax relief and tax incentives.

It likewise aimed the income tax system to be more equitable.

The law introduced, among others, the 2 percent minimum corporate income tax, the 30 percent on corporate income tax, the simplified earnings and fringe benefits law on fringe benefits received by non-stock and non-preferred shareholders.

Strategic administration

One of the most significant reforms introduced in 1999 was the implementation of the Economic Recovery Administration System (ERAS) program, which gave priority to the recovery of tax revenues. It targeted to collect at least 20 percent more than the tax paid in 1997 for income tax, 10 percent for percentage taxes.

The main objective of the ERAS program in 2000 initiative: full utilization of tax compliance incentives in the Bureau of Internal Revenue's operations; expansion of the use of electronic documentation filing; tax including machine and computerization of tax-up with the national government agencies and local government units for the prompt issuance of withholding tax, and implementation of Comprehensive Taxation Program for taxpayers with outstanding income tax debts and disputes associated with the ERAS.

On June 1, 2000, the Large Taxpayers Service (LTS) and the Small Taxpayers Service (STS) were established under RA 9175 to streamline the tax administration and enhance service quality of the BIR.

Aringo administration

The BIR's transformation program was introduced in 2001.

The program was based on several key tax administration reforms: an efficient, accountable, de-politicized and ethical tax system.

However, House Bill 3074, creating the Internal Revenue Management Authority or IRMA, and Senate Bill 1000, creating the Internal Revenue Authority or IRA, were both introduced in the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Since it was not deemed that the gains from reforming the tax agency may be reaped only in the medium term, the program was implemented by measures to enhance the BIR revenue-generating capability which included the implementation of the Internal Revenue Management Authority or IRA.

Aringo Program and expansion of coverage scope of the available withholding tax system.

The BIR, in its mission to provide an efficient and convenient service to the taxpayer, introduced the "Automated Filing of Returns".

As the year of the year in 2002, reduction of filing of individual income tax returns has been made by the BIR. The BIR has introduced a new system of filing of individual income tax returns which is applicable when the taxpayer's annual return of withholding tax on compensation and final tax on 100,000 pesos (P100,000) may be considered as the "return" income tax return of the taxpayer in which the information provided in the last two months of income tax withholding (BIR Form 2316) would be used to compute the tax liability.

Following the launch of the management director system, the BIR introduced the electronic filing system, which allows taxpayers to submit the return by the BIR of their tax payments made through authorized agent banks.

In 2003, the business enterprise annual return from the coverage of the VAT system, making it enforceable for medical services rendered by doctors of medicine duly registered with the PRC and services rendered by lawyers duly registered with the Bar.

HYUNDAI

AFTER sautéing garlic and onion according to dry chicken, pork and beef ribs.

POUR soy sauce and add a dash of pepper and sugar to the mix.

POUR a liter or so of chicken and pork stock, and cover the pot to allow it to boil gently.

All meats are now steam-boiling, put a little stock noodles into the pot. Don't forget to stir to combine.

AFTER noodles are thoroughly cooked in stock, add chopped vegetables to the mix. It's simply a matter of taste how much is usually served compared to each "dry" noodle preparation in other cuisines.

It's easy to understand why other than to stir-fry, noodles remain popular among Overseas Filipinos. The dish is found almost everywhere, from big gatherings to street vendors, where vendors serve it as a piece of comfort food to make it easier to eat.

"Not only is chami hearty and filling," says Cheong Shengwee of Lulu's Kitchen, "but it's also cheap and easy to eat."

With SM City Cebu's activities center in its focus, Lulu's Kitchen and Cheong Shengwee of Lulu's Kitchen, who has been cooking and serving chami for over 20 years.

"I've never cooking it, it's a good job and it's a good way to eat."

STEP BY STEP

Also keep a dash of ground pepper, brown sugar and soy sauce for use when cooking the stock.

After rinsing the noodles, make a generous portion of chicken, pork and beef ribs to boil in a pot, adding a dash of pepper and brown sugar.

For the stock, add a dash of pepper and brown sugar to the pot. The stock should be ready to use in about 15 minutes.
